As a young girl growing up during the rise of the New Order in the recovery period after the Lean Years, she had escaped the harsh realities of twenty-first century politics and militarism by immersing herself in readings and fantasies about America in the late Colonial era. At your age, you should know better." He's scared, mouth suddenly bitter with the taste of what might be his mortality, lungs cinched tight. "Well, give us a call when you do, and we'll fix something up. I live in Franklin, so there shouldn't be too much of a problem. That's where we usually get together." "Hey, back off, soldier," Ci said suspiciously. "We're still strangers. Later, who knows? Give it time." "But the rules are so dumb," Jay protested. "They don't make sense. "But we only know what we know, and we can only do what we can do. Surely doing so is not going to make things any worse. Will you try it?" Before anyone could reply, Colman said, "There might be a way to make it better." Everyone looked at him. He swept his hands around quickly. "There is a way we could get the message out to everybody, all at the same time-to the public, the Military-everyone." He looked around again. The others waited.
